* Description
* Description	This course is compulsory for English major undergraduates with concentration on translation and interpreting. It is designed to introduce milestone events, important people and their roles and contributions in Chinese and Western history, with a view to enabling the students to understand the complexity of translation as interlingual and intercultural communication, recognize the role of translation in historical events and human progress. It combines lectures, thematic presentations and discussions, with emphasis on inculcating a historical and theoretical awareness of practical issues and expounding systematic approaches to translation. The students are expected to read assigned book chapters and research papers and take an active part in presentations and discussions. The term paper serves to test the ability to explore and utilize primary and secondary sources to account for real-life translation cases based on theoretical musings.
